

PROGRESS TOWARD SETTLEMENT OF RAILROAD SHOPMEN'S STRIKE

Believed to Have Been Made at Conference Held in New York City This Morning—Stone Believes Settlement is Near But Will Not be Arrived at This Afternoon.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 18.—Progress towards a settlement of the railway shopmen's strike was believed to have been made here today at a conference of railway executives and brotherhood leaders. The conference recessed at 12:45 o'clock after a session lasting two hours and a half, to permit the brotherhood leaders to hold a conference with leaders of the other railway unions, who are in session in another part of the city.

Warren S. Stone, president of the Order of Locomotive Engineers, said that he could make no comment on the progress of negotiations but that the conference would be resumed at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"In any event I do not think a settlement can be reached today," he said, "as whatever is done must be taken up with the other unions."

The railway executives remained in session after the brotherhood leaders had left the meeting room at 61 Broadway.

When the brotherhood chiefs arrived at the hotel Woodstock, where the leaders of the other unions are staying, they immediately went into secret session with them.

Mr. Stone, in talking with newspapermen, made it clear that he believed a settlement would be reached but did not hold out hopes of anything being done immediately. He gave the impression that it might be several days before the agreement is reached.

FORTY INJURED IN DERAILMENT OF NIAGARA FALLS STREET CARS

Tracks Had Been Blown Up With Dynamite and Three Cars Crashed Into the Hole—Most of Those Injured Suffered Only Slight Bruises.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Forty persons were injured early today on the Niagara Falls street line, when a northbound three-car train was derailed and upset, three quarters of a mile outside Buffalo city line.

Tracks had been blown up with dynamite. Patrolman Otto Schultz chased four men in a touring car from the scene of the explosion but he lost them. While he was on the chase, one of the several three-car trains from Buffalo for the Falls passed, and dashed into the break in the rails. Schultz stopped his chase, to speed after a second three-car train in his roadster and succeeded in heading it off.

Most of the injured merely suffered slight bruises.

The trouble occurred about three quarters of a mile beyond the city line. About midnight, as the three car train approached, a section of track was blown up causing a hole about three feet deep by eight feet wide in the roadbed.

This stopped the first car, switching it across the tracks. The second plowed into the first and the third then hit the hole and was turned on its side.

Lights were extinguished and the confusion was great. As soon as possible the car men summoned ambulances and the seriously injured were taken to hospitals, the others to hotels or their homes.

Harding Tells The People Full Story of The Strikes

In a Vigorous Message He Lays the Matter Before Congress and the Nation, Asking That Measures be Taken to End the Strikes and Prevent Future Situations Like That Now Existing.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Aug. 18.—Under the shadow of a great impending industrial crisis, President Harding went to congress today, told the "full story" of the twin coal and rail strikes, and asked that legislative steps be taken to deal with the present situation and to safeguard against a repetition of it.

The president's message, a vigorous document, dealt with both coal and rail strikes.

In the coal situation, the president recommended:

1.—That he be given authority to create a national coal commission to investigate the whole industry.

2.—That congress consider at once the creation of a temporary national coal agency with the needed capital to purchase, sell and distribute coal which is carried in interstate commerce.

In the railroad strike, the president did not recommend any legislation except insofar as it related to the protection of alien workmen.

He severely criticized both sides in the rail dispute, carriers and unions; he described the Railway Labor Board as entirely inadequate to deal with the situation, declared it would have to be strengthened, and condemned in almost unprecedentedly strong terms, the acts of violence all the way from the Herrin, Ill., massacre, to the desertion of trains at desert terminal points in Arizona.

"It is not my thought," President Harding said, "to ask congress to deal with these fundamental questions (strengthening the powers of the Labor Board) at this time."

"No hasty action would contribute to the solution of the present critical situation. There are statutes forbidding conspiracy to hinder interstate commerce. It is my purpose to invoke these laws, civil and criminal, against all offenders alike."

While the president asked no action of congress at this time, he affirmed the federal government's determination to maintain transportation at any cost.

"I am resolved," he said, "to use all the power of the government to maintain transportation and sustain the right of men to work."

This was interpreted as constituting a flat and unequivocal assertion that if the unions quit work on the railroads the federal government will afford every protection to the railway managements in their efforts to keep trains moving.

The president's condemnation of both employers and of unions in both coal and rail industries, was probably the most severe ever addressed by a chief executive to congress.

The railway executives he criticized for their "hard boiled" attitude, and rendered a thinly-veiled warning that there is a "union-bust" campaign in progress in some quarters.

"The government," he asserted, "has no sympathy or approval for this element of discord in the ranks of industry."

The railway unions were harshly criticized for their unyielding attitude and most particularly for their desertion of trains at desert terminal points, causing suffering and discomfort to travelers.

It was about the Herrin, Ill., massacre, however, that the president waxed most indignant. He handled it without gloves and he expressed the wish that federal courts be empowered to go into the situation such as Herrin and mete out justice.

"In that butchery of human beings, wrought in madness, it is alleged that two aliens were murdered," the president said. "This act adds to the outraged sense of American justice, the humiliation which lies in the federal government's confessed lack of authority to punish that unutterable crime."

Had it happened in any other country, the president said, "we would have pitied the civilization that allowed it."

Justice, he declared, had failed in Illinois, and there would always be a blot on the national shield because of Herrin, Ills.

The president's appraisal of the present industrial situation, as a result of the weeks of the coal and rail strikes, was that it is most acute.

On the one hand, he pointed to the nation's empty coal bins, and on the other to the slow strangulation of transportation by impaired equipment on the railroads.

He recounted at length how sporadic lawlessness and intimidation have kept men away from work.

"Under these conditions of hindrance and intimidation," he declared, "there has been such a lack of care of motive power that the deterioration of locomotives and non-compliance with safety requirements of the law are threatening the breakdown of transportation."

Neither the railroads nor the unions may escape moral responsibility for this situation, he said.

The whole tenor of President Harding's address was a plea that congress must take steps to prevent a recurrence of present conditions.

"There can be no liberty and democracy maintained in America," he asserted, "unless there is the same recognition given the right to work as there is the right to quit work."

"However," he concluded, "the legal safeguarding against like menaces in the future must be worked out when no passion sways, when no prejudices influence, when the whole problem may be appraised, and the public welfare may be asserted against any and every interest which assumes authority beyond that of the government itself."

Meanwhile the president indicated, the government is prepared to insure maintenance of transportation, whatever comes.

CONVICTS MOTOR AWAY WITH WARDEN

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Sioux Falls, S. D., Aug. 18.—Hundreds of armed men are today engaged in a man hunt for four convicts who escaped from the state prison here during the night, taking with them Warden George W. Jamieson. An airplane was being used to direct the search.

The convicts escaped following a riot in the tailor shop of the prison. They forced Warden Jamieson to unlock the prison gates and accompany them. They used him as a shield to prevent guards from shooting at them. Once outside they jumped into a waiting automobile and taking the warden with them, sped off to the north.

Anthracite Coal Strike Practically Settled

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—With the preliminaries and formalities out of the way, anthracite miners and operators settled down today to the serious task of whipping into shape the tentative contract for the ending of the twenty weeks' coal strike.

Prospects were bright for peace and settlement of the hard coal differences may be worked out before nightfall. In the camp of each side it is freely admitted that never have anthracite employers and men entered into negotiations in a more friendly spirit.

Peace is to be made on a give-and-take basis. Leaders of the men and chiefs of the operators went to work early today in moulding programs for presentation at this afternoon's conference.

Length of the contract becomes one of the hard problems to work out today. Miners insist on a two-year agreement dating from April 1 last. They will readily accept the old scale for three years or for four, if they can get it.

The operators are not looking for any agreement that would send the men back to the mines to provide winter coal and precipitate a strike of suspension next spring because no lasting program has been worked out.

The probabilities are that the new contract will be written for a term of three years.

Out of yesterday's conference grew a proposition that would make the old wage scale the basis of a new agreement, and provide for arbitration of the other demands. With the wage question determined, the union leaders feel that they would not have much at stake in submitting the rest of the Shamokin program to arbitration.

KIWANIS HOLDS A HOT MEETING

Everybody at the Kiwanis luncheon Thursday had their coats off except Dean Hickey, his clerical guest and a couple of dignified Saugerties doctors, but that's as far as the heat affected anybody. Heat, vacation period and all the other standard excuses for summer absences had been forgotten and there was a large attendance. With reports that the Boy Scouts campaign is coming, fine promise of a large number to make the trip to Albany next Tuesday when the ball team plays Albany Kiwanis and the eloquence of former Assemblyman Andrew J. Cook titillating its tympanums the membership, felt pretty well satisfied with its collective self.

Team captains reported, as they have all along, that the collection of the Scout fund is only a matter of work and made some pertinent remarks about the slackers who will share in the credit that results when the quota is reached but, as far as their own efforts go, would compel the workers to share in something much different.

Mr. Cook, commanded to speak on "The Law and Lawyers," pointed out how impossible it was to cover one law or one lawyer in that time and then launched into an exhortation of the results of the prohibition laws. The eighteenth amendment, the Volstead law and the concurrent state legislation, he averred, had resulted in a disrespect of all law, abridged the freedom originally guaranteed Americans, made criminals of those who formerly were not and had proven impossible of enforcement, so strong was the sentiment against them. He thought there could be enacted a modified statute which would do away with most of the inequities of the old wet regime and yet satisfy the reformers insofar as any enforceable law could.

As to lawyers, he pointed out that they needed no defense, that some 19 out of the 29 American presidents had been lawyers, along with holders of lesser public offices innumerable, and as to their oneness with humanity he read a will made by a penniless Chicago attorney before his death in the poorhouse. It was so unusual as to compel solemnity among even this irrepressible gathering, bequeathing to childhood, youth, maturity and old age the enjoyment of the choicest gifts of nature in language such as only a genius, or a crazy man could produce. The maker of the will was deceased, but his will was admitted to probate.

Morris Samter donated the attendance prize and Judge Joseph M. Fowler won it but refused to sing for it. He was made to introduce the rest of those present.

Tuesday a large number of Kiwanians and their families and friends will go Albany to watch their team play the Albany Kiwanis and afterwards all will dine together. Newburgh Kiwanis is down for a game at Newburgh on August 30.

GRAIN TRANSPORTATION BY WAY OF BARGE CANAL

Rivermen are interested in the passing down the river Wednesday on its way to Brooklyn of the canal barge steamer, Westchester, towing two barges with a total cargo of 46,000 bushels of grain. The Westchester is the pioneer of a new all the way by water service, from Toledo, Ohio, to New York. The steamer left Toledo July 27 and, crossing Lake Erie to Buffalo, was routed by the Niagara river and the Hudson, thence to New York. The steamer, Rensselaer and Putnam, towing barges with similar cargoes are now on the way to New York by the same route. The New York Canal and Great Lakes Corporation contemplates the establishment of a regular water service between Toledo and New York city.

OLD TIMERS HERE STILL HOPE FOR HORSE-RACING

There are still a goodly number of old timers living in this city who hope that horse racing will come back in Kingston. They read with interest the results of the trotting at the Grand Circuit at Poughkeepsie and the races at Goshen and some of them attend these races occasionally. The nearest racing to Kingston each year is at the Ulster county fair at Ellenville, which will be next week and at the Dutchess county fair at Rhinebeck to be held August 30, 31, and September 1 and 2. The old time lovers of horse racing frequently talk of the days when A. J. Feek, Jimmy Goldsmith, James W. Murphy of Poughkeepsie, William E. Weeks and John Van Tassel and others had steeplechases on the Fair Ground track on Manor avenue, and when Tanner Boy, Lysander Boy, Berkshire Boy from Catskill, Walnut, Dexter and others scored several times before they were given the word "Go" by Billy Brush, Theron Johnston who were starters in the judges' stand. The Saugerties road, as it was called then, now better known as Albany avenue, from Manor avenue to Broadway, which was a very bad dirt road then was one big cloud of dust like a smoke screen after the close of the races as every one at the races with a horse endeavored to beat the other fellow to town with his nag.

Bran Will Free Your Entire Family from Constipation!

EIGHT MILLION PEOPLE were admitted to the hospitals of America last year. Nine-tenths of the sickness can be traced to constipation! If every man, woman and child would eat Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krum-bled, each day, nine-tenths of all sickness would be eliminated!

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krum-bled, is not a "remedy." It is Nature's health food. Bran acts as a sweepstake, at the same time cleaning and purifying without irritation or discomfort! Results are astounding!

Physicians endorse the use of Kellogg's Bran for constipation because it corrects constipation as a cause of ill health. Your food—not as a "remedy." Your physician will tell you that the best way to relieve constipation is through food. We guarantee Kellogg's Bran will relieve constipation permanently if at least two tablespoonsful are eaten regularly. Chronic cases should use as much more as necessary.

When Kellogg's Bran is eaten regularly it will also clear up a pimply complexion and sweeten the breath.

And, Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krum-bled, is a deliciously good! Kellogg's Bran has an appetizing nut-like flavor, is crisp and adds zest to any food with which it is eaten. Or, it's just fine to eat as a cereal! Or, sprinkle it over your favorite cereal! Kellogg's Bran is used in muffins, rolls, bread, macaroni, pancakes and in a hundred other palate-tickling ways—and all the time building health!

Start the children eating Kellogg's Bran. It will actually increase their growth. Get it at your grocer's.

A DISASTROUS POLICY.

Those congressmen who are responsible for the temporary three per cent immigration law, and face the problem of enacting a permanent and more satisfactory law, would do well to give attention to Kenneth L. Roberts' current magazine article, "Canada Bars the Gates." It shows very clearly that the three per cent law is a weak-kneed evasion of the imperative need of a practical system of selected immigration, in that it still lets in the bad and the good alike on a percentage basis, and this because of the desire of politicians to offend no one, either the undesirable immigrants who demand the admission of their relatives or the sloppy native sentimentalists who absurdly argue that this country does not belong to the people of America "but to the people of all the world."

The Canadian authorities, on the other hand, are neither so foolish nor so cowardly. They frankly admit that their law causes hardship to people already in Canada who wish to bring relatives into the country, and they courageously take the consequences, which they regard as infinitely less serious than the consequences of permitting their country—rightly regarding it as theirs and not "all the world's"—to be swamped for generations to come by morons, inefficient, moral weaklings, and their crowding progeny. And so they have developed a practical system of selected immigration in their own interests and the interests of their descendants. Regarding this firm and admirable stand we read:

The Canadian authorities are thoroughly awake to the incontrovertible facts of immigration—such facts as the ultimate result of bad stock on the future of the race and the inevitable tendency of the best stock to die out while the worst stock is energetically reproducing itself. They are familiar with the findings of such biologists as Edwin Grant Conklin and Charles Benedict Davenport. They have drawn careful conclusions from the fact that although the slave trade brought not more than 400,000 negroes to the United States, there are not more than ten million negroes and mulattoes in the country. These facts can not be dodged. The result of filling the United States with millions of the worst stock in Europe will be a very terrible thing in another 200 years.

This truth and the appalling prospect ought to be squarely faced by our lawmakers, but unhappily they for the most part, are not interested in what may happen in 50, 100 or 200 years, being concerned only about holding the votes of their foreign-born and the offspring of their foreign-born constituents. They even blink the appalling damage already done by the unrestricted and unselected immigration allowed to pour into this country during the past fifty years. Our army tests of the draft on our foreign-born groups and on the sons of the same, as well as other careful investigations, have shown conclusively as well as portentously, according to the writer quoted, that "the bulk of the immigration to the United States since 1880 are mentally deficient, wholly unfit to exercise their judgment in voting, and thoroughly undesirable as a part of our population or as progenitors of future citizens of the United States."

OUR CRIMINAL RECORD.

The committee on law enforcement of the American Bar Association finds that in the matter of crimes of violence the United States has the worst record of any country of the world, pointing out that there were 9,500 "unlawful homicides" in 1921 and that during the last ten years 55,000 were killed in this country "by poisons, by the pistol or the knife, or some other deadly instrument." The committee therefore recommends that the manufacture and sale of pistols and cartridges be prohibited, except for governmental and official use. But this would still leave the "poisons, the knife, or some other deadly instrument." It would also raise a lively crop of pistol bootleggers. No sort of prohibition of manufacture and sale can eliminate evil from the human heart or suppress the determination to indulge either passions or appetites.

The committee points toward a more possible means of reform when it states that "the means provided in the United States for coping with crime and criminals are today neither adequate nor efficient." Under our judicial system and through the influence of maudlin sentimentalists too few criminals are punished enough to make the law the needed terror to evil doers. And, in looking for the causes of our frightful record, the committee might have done well to pay less attention to pistols (which do not shoot of themselves) and more to the character of a vast percentage of our population, with its ten million negroes and more than ten million immigrants coming to us from the slums of Europe during recent decades. Locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen is a fruitless process, but even now more might be accomplished by a wise system of selected immigration than by the attempted suppression of pistols. And more still could be accomplished by swift, certain and adequate punishment of crime.

Burroughs Nature Club Notes

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. About how often do parent birds feed their young?
2. If cabbage and cauliflower are the same family, and taste a good deal alike, how do they turn out so different in looks?
3. Can bats fly as well as birds?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Is the scarlet tanager bright colored in winter?
No, not even all summer. The scarlet coat is moulted in late summer preparatory to the fall migration, at which time the male is olive-tinted similar to his mate. But he keeps his black jet wings and tail. Her wing coverts are rusty or brownish.

2. How do peanuts grow?
Underground, as nearly everyone knows; but the details are not commonly familiar. The orange-yellow blossom, resembling a pea blossom, becomes pollenized, drops off its stamens and corolla, leaving the ovary (containing ovules) as tip to a stalk that pushes out and turns downward, plunging the ovary into the ground. Unless the ovary can bury itself, it cannot ripen and mature seed.

3. Please tell me the name of the green lizard seen in South Carolina, that has something under his throat that he sticks out, and people call it his colors. Is he poison if he bites?
The American chameleon, so-called. Anolis Carolinensis, evidently is meant. It is found from the Neuse river, North Carolina, southward through Florida, and westward to the Rio Grande in Texas. The male has a loose fold of skin under the throat, which he expands, fan-shape, and when it is thus stretched, the skin shows bright red between the green scales. Not poisonous.

DREW PROFESSOR PREACHES

FOUR TIMES SUNDAY

Professor John Alfred Faulkner, D. D., head of the Department of Church History at Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., is to preach Sunday, August 20, at Pine Hill and Shandaken. In fact he is to preach four times on Sunday: At Big Indian church, at 9:45 a. m.; Shandaken Methodist Church, at 11:00 a. m.; at Olivera, at 3:00 p. m., and at Pine Hill at 8:00 p. m., standard time.

Last Sunday Professor Faulkner preached at Crestwood Methodist Episcopal Church, Tuckahoe, for the Rev. William F. Compton, D. D. On August 20 he will preach for the Rev. George Frederick Wells, pastor at Pine Hill and Shandaken, while the Rev. Mr. Wells preaches at Crestwood.

Professor Faulkner is the leading church historian of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and being the guest of the Rev. Mr. Wells, a former pupil, this unusual privilege is given to the people of the Pine Hill, Shandaken charge.

Dr. Faulkner arrived at Pine Hill Thursday. The latest of the several books of which he is the author is "Modernism and the Christian Faith." He is an inspiring, and attractive preacher, as well as being a great historian and scholar in theology.

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

The System Requires More Liquids in Summer

Doctors claim 8
needed

Your body is composed very largely of water. More than 80% of the whole body is water, and if the solids were pressed absolutely dry, they would make a mass not much larger than your fist.

A large percentage of this water passes out of the system every day, and must be replaced, as your health depends on there being enough water to keep the machinery of the body running smoothly. In summer, when the heat causes more perspiration, you require more than the usual amount of liquids to keep in shape.

Doctors urge the drinking of at least eight glasses of liquid a day, preferably between meals, in order to keep the system flushed out. One of the most healthful liquids you can drink is Utica Club Pilsener. Although not habit forming, it is a mild stimulant and tonic, an aid to digestion and a drink with real food value. Utica Club Pilsener contains vitamins which are absolutely essential to health and possesses a delicious flavor which has made it a favorite beverage everywhere.

A bottle of Utica Club Pilsener is the middle of the morning and afternoon, and one in the evening. If you wish, will furnish the glasses you cannot get along without, and at the same time provide the water so essential to your health.

Telephone your dealer for a case today. If he cannot supply you, phone 1950 or 1450-R. Kramer & Sigel, 70 Chambers street, Rochester, local distributors.

BIG AUTO DISPLAY AT ELLENVILLE

There will be a big display of automobiles of various makes at the Ellenville Fair next week. 1,000 feet of floor space will be allotted to the display of over 100 different cars.

Secretary Brice Moore of the Ulster County Agricultural Society announces that there will be a large display of live stock of all kinds. A. W. Hilton & Sons, of South Worcester, N. Y., will bring five carloads of sheep and swine and P. S. Lewis of Ashville, N. Y., will show four carloads. Herbert Brooks, of Sundown, will show a herd of short-horns, besides sheep. The prospects of a large display of fruit and vegetables are excellent.

The Main Building booths are about all taken up. There will be several good clean tent shows and a lot of "Midway" attractions. Buick and Dodge cars will be exhibited by the Arcadia Garage, Kerhonkson; Fords, Durants, and Fordson tractors by Marshall-Jensen Co., of Ellenville; Durants and Stars, by the Van Kleeck Motor Car Co., of Kingston; Cadillac by the Ulster Garage, Kingston; Paige by Homer C. Kuhlman, of Ellenville.

In addition to the trotting and pacing races, for which the purses are fast filling, there will be running races on Thursday and Friday, and two automobile races on Friday for which there will be prizes of $500.

A pleasing feature of the fair will be solos rendered by Mrs. Clifford Miller of Chester, who has been singing at the Goshen races the past week.

Entries are now being received day and night at the Association rooms over F. J. Potter's store, Ellenville.

DE VALERA ILL AND DESPONDENT

As Told to The Freeman.
Dublin, Aug. 18.—Broken in health and spirit, Eamonn de Valera, commander-in-chief of the Republican irregulars, was reported today to be lying ill in a farmhouse near Killybeg in western Ireland.

De Valera is said to have told his followers that they were liberty to quit fighting if they chose, but he was determined to stick it out.

The ring of Free State troops is drawing closer and closer about the irregulars.

A detachment of irregulars is trying to make a stand on a twenty-mile front along the Blackwater river.

The dying message of Arthur Griffith, imploring "the Irish nation to stand firm for the treaty" (Anglo-Irish peace treaty), is being circulated throughout the country and is expected to add new fighting spirit to the Free State soldiers.

None of Mother's Timidity.

DEMANDS OWN ALLOWANCE

Plans Her Own Trip to England and Tells Her Mother That She Must Get About to See the World—Breaks All Precedents and Deals Directly With Tailor—Lately She Has Taken to Doing Her Own Shopping.

Princess Iolanda, the eldest child of the king and queen of Italy, is visiting London. She virtually bosses the entire Italian royal family, including her brother, Prince Umberto. She has inherited her mother's beauty, but not her timidity. It was she who planned her trip to England. Being nearly twenty-one, and not having been out of Italy, she told her royal mother that she must get about to see the world.

Probably no commoner's family has lived such a dull life as have the royal children. Their mother was so afraid that they would get wrong ideas of life that she rarely allowed them even to have friends in to tea. As for going to visit the children of her ladies-in-waiting, such an innovation was never even suggested. It was only when the new governor of the crown took charge that a change came over the royal family.

Commander Bonaldi, as he was when first he was made aide-de-camp to the king, and later governor of the crown, is a Venetian, and a man of good family but not of noble lineage. He became a favorite with the royal children, because he was youthful in years and a cheerful, happy person. They shared his society with that of their brother, and whenever they wanted anything they often talked it over with Bonaldi.

Until this year the queen always ordered clothes for Iolanda, as well as for the other children, but now that Iolanda is grown up, she prefers to order her own dresses.

Deals Directly With Tailor.

No doubt the question of a separate allowance for Iolanda might have been held in abeyance had not a letter been received from an Anglo-American tailor begging the princess to fill in an enclosed form with her measurements, stating what sort of dress she would like the patriotic overseas tailor to make her. The royal sewing woman was called in and the measurements taken and sent the same day, with a letter from the princess, saying that she would like a riding habit, as no one had ever made her one which fitted her perfectly. This step was not according to royal etiquette, as Iolanda should have sent the tailor's application to the secretarial staff of the royal household, who, in turn, would have written a formal note enclosing the measurements. Instead, the princess is modern enough and feminine enough to want to attend to things in a hurry. She and her sisters and her brothers all waited anxiously for several months, and Mafalda, who is a terrible tease, worried her poor sister Iolanda because an American tailor had wanted to play a joke on her.

But after three months were over a box was brought to the royal residence, Villa Sabota, outside the Salaria gate, and in it was a wonderful riding habit of covert cloth and also a skirt, in case the princess sometimes rode a side saddle. The suit fitted beautifully, and other costumes would no doubt have been ordered, but the tailor refused to accept payment for the habit, insisting that the letter written so kindly and simply by the princess was enough reward. Of course, under the circumstances, the royal princess could not possibly accept further kindnesses.

This bit of independence on the part of Iolanda led her to broach the subject of a separate allowance. The matter was talked over with the friend and counselor, Admiral Bonaldi (for he had been promoted), and finally the queen agreed.

Does Her Own Shopping.

During the last few months Iolanda has been shopping on her own account and has ordered several dresses, nearly all of them coats and skirts. Her friends say that it is this fondness for coats and skirts which has decided her to order some when she is in London. Until this year she never went to the opera in the evening, as the queen is a great stay-at-home and prefers visiting hospitals and charitable institutions during the daytime, which leaves her ready to retire early at night.

This clustering around the home hearth is not at all to the taste of Princess Iolanda and her sister, Mafalda. They have gradually taken to going to the theater, accompanied by ladies-in-waiting. As no royal balls have been given for seven years, neither has been introduced to the inner circle of society, which is their right, but it is certain that next winter Iolanda must have a coming-out.

Society is not much in either of these girls' life, as they have been brought up to love the open air. Whenever they have a chance they go motoring around the country with only a gentleman in waiting and a chauffeur. The latter has little to do, as Princess Mafalda has already been given her permit as chauffeur and a very clever one she is. Any visitor to Rome can see her at an afternoon driving about the villa Borghese and the Pincio, in her little two-wheeler, with a small seat in the rear for the attendant.

Princess Giovanna, the third daughter, is next to Princess Iolanda, the beauty of the family. She lacks the energy of the two older girls and is fond of embroidery and reading. She

COLONIALS LOSE TO SCHATZ 7 TO 4

Poor Fielding, Inability To Hit In Pinches And A Bad Start Due To Pitcher's Box Being Misplaced.

Due to poor fielding and inability to hit in the pinches the Colonial Baseball Team went down to defeat at the hands of the Schatz Club in Poughkeepsie yesterday afternoon 7-4. MacAuliffe started in the pitcher's box for the home team but after three innings he gave way to Culliton who pitched a good brand of ball, allowing the Poughkeepsie team only one run in the six innings he pitched. The Schatz players found MacAuliffe for five hits and six runs during the three innings which he pitched.

Naturally the Kingston followers were somewhat surprised at this showing by "Mac" and were at loss to account for it. When "Bud" went in the mystery was solved by him for he had no sooner pitched the first ball over than he called for a tape measure and had the distance between home plate and the pitcher's box measured. This disclosed the fact that the distance was six and one-half feet longer than it should have been and solved to the satisfaction of all concerned the problem of why "Mickie" had not been able to make his curves break over the plate as they should have done and no doubt would have done if conditions had been right.

Although Beecher was found for more hits than were either of the Colonial pitchers he was supreme in the pinches and also received airtight support when he needed it, which accounts in a measure for the scarcity of runs in the Colonial's side of the box score. The Poughkeepsie twister succeeded in disposing of ten Kingston batters by way of the strikeout route.

The Kingston team placed two Kingston players on the bags in the first inning but lacked the punch necessary to send these men in home. In the Schatz half of this inning Schaeckard hit safely over second and Ed Phelan tried to Glaze who dropped it allowing Phelan to reach first and scoring Murphy who had been walked by MacAuliffe.

The second inning was also uneventful as far as Kingston was concerned but the Schatz succeeded in putting over two more rallies. In this inning Grey hit to short and reached first on a wild throw by Deegan. Mulhoney also hit to short and reached first on Matty's error who seemed to be having a rather hard time of it. Marsh was then walked by MacAuliffe which filled the bases. Grey came home on a squeeze play engineered by Beecher who pointed to "Mac."

The third inning was the most disastrous for the Kingston team, for they failed to score again while the Schatz club was annexing three more runs to their end of the score. Caserly hit through short reaching first and Phelan hit safely over third, advancing Caserly to second. Roel then hit safely, advancing Caserly to third and Phelan to second, which again loaded the bases. Mulhoney then sacrificed, scoring Grey. Before the inning ended the Poughkeepsie players by sending out some good safe one base hits put two more men over the rubber making the score at this juncture 6-0.

In the fourth inning the Schatz obtained their only run from Culliton and their last one of the game. Neither team did anything worth talking about in the fifth inning but in the sixth the Colonials began to find their batting eye which they seemingly had left home up to this point in the proceedings. Covey hit a hard one over third. Bill Schwab hit a two bagger to left field sending Covey to third. Culliton hit to center field scoring Covey. Bud then began to pull off some real strategic work. He started for second and at the same time Bill started for home. At first the Poughkeepsie players played on Culliton but seeing their mistake they decided to play on Bill. Bill then started back for third while the first baseman becoming somewhat excited over threw third which scored Bill and gave the Colonials their second run of the afternoon.

Neither team did anything in the seventh but in the eighth the Colonials annexed two more tallies. Moore hit safely and reached third due to numerous errors by the Poughkeepsie players. Glaser then hit over short scoring Moore. Schemerhorn then hit to second basemen's error. Matty hit driving Glaser in which ended the game as far as scoring was concerned as neither team had the punch to put over any more runs although the home team did succeed in getting some runners on the bases in the ninth.

Very likely the Schatz will play a double header in this city on Labor day although nothing definite has been decided upon.

The game was witnessed by one of the largest crowds the Schatz have had out to any of their games and speaks well for the popularity of the Colonials as a baseball team.

FROM BUCKETSHOP TO JAIL

Conviction and Imprisonment of Operator for Crime of Grand Larceny,
Meets With Approval.

The first conviction in New York state of a bucketshop operator, and his sentence to Sing Sing prison for grand larceny, marks, in the opinion of the New York Herald, "what ought to be the start of a long procession of such creatures, little and big, to state's prison." Moreover, agrees the Philadelphia Public Ledger, "it shows what can be done if the authorities and the defrauded public co-operate." Financial writers have estimated that the bucketshops of New York city despoil the people of the United States of at least $100,000,000 a year, remarks the Literary Digest. Early in the year thousands of victims revealed their losses to the district attorney of New York, who immediately began prosecutions. At one time there were more than thirty firms under investigation, with total losses estimated up to $75,000,000. The first conviction was made possible, as the Herald explains, under a ruling of the United States Supreme court which refuses to allow a federal court bankruptcy proceedings to "be a shield for such flagrant crook edness as bucketshop operations." Since it formerly was the custom of bucketshop operators to take refuge in bankruptcy proceedings and receiverships, and thus keep their books beyond the reach of prosecuting attorneys, the handicap under which these officers worked prior to the Supreme court ruling can easily be seen.

"What is a bucketshop operator, or 'bucketeer,' as he is often called? The staid and formal definition of the dictionary is that he is one who operates a shop which uses the terms and outward forms of the exchanges, but who has no intention to deliver or receive securities. Newspaper editors are less charitable in their definitions. 'He is a sure-thing better,' asserts the New York World while in the opinion of the Providence Journal he is merely 'an ordinary thief, and should be prosecuted as such.' As this paper explains:

"The unwary customer takes his money to the bucketshop in the confidence that it will be used for the purchase of stock. As a rule, of course, the intended investment is only a speculative and marginal one, but if the margin is accepted as sufficient it is the broker's duty to make the purchase. No purchases are made in a bucketshop, nor are sales. The customer pays for a service which he is told has been rendered, but which has not been."

"Unless the law takes a hand, the operator cannot well lose," notes the New York World. In the recent conviction and sentence of the New York "broker," who, according to the Judge, "entered into a scheme to fleece peo-pie in modest circumstances out of their hard-earned savings, a "small fish" was caught; "but," predicts the Philadelphia Public Ledger, "when the prosecuting authorities hale into court some of the big men, and make a serious effort to convict them of bucketing, this sort of thievery will not be so common as it is today."

Japanese Courtesy.
Social service is manifestly a very real service in Japan, where a most solicitous interest in the welfare of the public is shown even by municipal authorities. "In the most unexpected places," says Miss Mary Page, a Y. W. C. A. worker in Kyoto, Japan, "we find a keen enthusiasm for every variety of service which tends to lighten the standard of living. For instance, when it rains here in Kyoto our police boxes hang out little signs, 'We lend umbrellas,' and the poor, benighted souls who have ventured out without their picturesque rain parasols are able to go home safe and dry—free of charge." On the street corner the other day I saw a bicycle rack equipped with all sorts of tools and pumps labeled, "Please Use Freely." Quite in keeping with the general attitude of quaint courtesy is the act of the keeper of grass plots to hurt his fellow citizens by a peremptory "Keep Off the Grass," put up a sign which read: "Much more better that you go round."

Early Risers.
Thomas Smith, an Illinois farmer living southwest of Vincennes, boasted of being the earliest riser in his neighborhood. "I am always up before three in the morning," Smith is said to have told his neighbor, William Bowman. Bowman said he was always up before that time, and had a part of his chores done. Smith, thinking his neighbor was a member of the Amnias club, decided to do a little investigation on his own account, and a few mornings later got up at two o'clock and went to Bowman's home. He rapped on the back door and Mrs. Bowman opened it. "Where is your husband?" asked Smith, expecting to find his neighbor still in bed. "He was around here early in the morning," answered his wife, "but I don't know where he is now." Smith, thoroughly disgusted, returned home, vowing that he would be careful of his hostess thereafter.—Indianapolis News.

Peculiar and Annoying Fact.
It is an unaccountable peculiarity of the fellow who hasn't much of an argument that he wants everybody to hear it.—Toronto Blade.

Dear Sir:—In Freeman dated August 16, was a resolution introduced by Alderman Martin about the city keeping in repair the clock in the First Dutch Church, as it is used by the general public.

He is very much mistaken if he has to go to Wall street to see the time, the people of the city have their own clocks, from the alarm to the more expensive clock and almost everyone has a watch, even the children, and there is a clock in nearly every store in the city. Seventy years ago is not today. If the First Dutch Church wants to keep it for a relic, let them do so, but it does not interest the taxpayers of the city that have a better place for their money.

We have had enough of such foolish talk; let us hear more common sense.

Respectfully yours,

HER YEAR OFF

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(C. 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Emma Brown's classmates were all agreed that she had drawn the plum from the pedagogical pie when, the September after she graduated from college, she received an appointment to teach in the high school at Montrose Highlands. Not only would her work be under the most 'delightful' conditions of splendid equipment and inspiring surroundings, and draw, even at the start, a very fair salary, but she would in time be eligible for Curtis Hunt's Sabbatical Year.

Curtis Hunt was the comparatively new superintendent of schools of Montrose Highlands. He had instituted many reforms, none of them, however, more popular than his Sabbatical Year. "High school teachers, as well as college professors," he stoutly maintained, "should be allowed a year off, every seventh year, for recuperation and study. In time we hope to grant this year's vacation with full pay; at present, all we can do is to allow a small bonus and hold the position open."

Emma, strange to say, was not vitally interested in this feature of her job. Seven years! Why, by that time she hoped to be married and have three children at least.

Yet one year passed, then several. And still Emma reported faithfully at a quarter of nine in Room 200 on the third floor.

And so her Sabbatical Year came to Emma. And at its close, back in school, she appeared at the first teachers' meeting of the season, where she knew from experience she would be called upon for a report of what she had done during her absence.

When her opportunity came Emma arose, and, grasping the chair-back in front of her, swept her audience with a brave glance. "Some of my Sabbatical year," she told them, "was spent at the university; some of it was spent taking a course in Phoenician archaeology, the rest of it I put in making myself ready for—for marriage—studying how to be a companion, a thrifty helpmate and a home maker." She sat down amid a silence that was audible.

Then smoothly, tactfully, under John Wentworth's hand, the meeting flowed on in the usual channels.

Emma had unconsciously accomplished a strange thing. She had focused upon herself the attention of every fellow teacher, man and woman. And that attention, once captured, remained riveted. For it was impossible not to observe that Emma wore different clothes and wore them in a new way, and that her personal appearance had grown more youthful, yes, more beautiful. The women would have understood had they known that a course in dressmaking and weekly visits to a reliable beauty specialist had been a part of Emma's past year. The men accepted the change at face value, but were none the less interested.

John Wentworth, walking home with Emma, discovered that she was womanly, alluring, provocative. He began to regret his many years of bachelorhood and to wonder how soon he could bring them to an end. Here was a woman, drawing a good salary, who had come out bravely and declared she wished to marry. What a treasure and a marvel such a woman was, these modern days!

If Emma cared for Wentworth she gave no outward sign of it that winter, but pursued her pedagogical way serenely, accepting equally the attentions of the principal, the head of the science department, the history teacher and the young instructor in English. A trifle bitterly the other women teachers compared notes and laid little bets among themselves as to the final outcome. And every one privately resolved at a try for one of the unsuccessful competitors. Emma had blazed a trail they condemned in public but secretly longed to pursue.

Then came the spring vacation, from which Emma returned with a radiant happy look in her eyes and a ring that sparkled triumphantly on its appropriate finger.

Was it John Wentworth or the history man or—?

But after school in the teachers' restroom Emma satisfied their curiosity. "It's Curtis Hunt, girls. I'm sure you're not surprised."

But, as a matter of fact, they were, and crowded about her with ejaculations and congratulations.

"Come, Emma, loosen up," begged Mabel Southwick. "My year off is due. Tell us what you did that got all the men interested."

"Well," said Emma, twisting her ring with a whimsical glance "I studied up clothes and I studied up the gentle art of conversation. I made the most of my looks and I took a correspondence course in household economics, interior decorating and cooking. But, well, to be frank about it, I'll have to confess that Phoenician archaeology did as much for me as anything!"

"Phoenician archaeology!" The two words were uttered in chorus.

"Exactly," said Emma. "You see, I knew Curtis Hunt was going to take that course, too!"

Probably a Lawyer.

Ice Took a Tumble.

Traffic was suspended this morning for a time about 8 o'clock when an ice wagon of the Bluewater Lake Ice Company broke down at the corner of Fair and St. James street, spilling the ice.

POULTRY

FEED AND CARE FOR PULLETS

Most Common Mistake to Give Fowls Free Range and Compel Them to Hustle for Living.

When should an April pullet begin laying? Generally the statement is made that Leghorn pullets should begin when five to five and one-half months old; Rhode Island Reds and Wyandotte pullets take a month longer and Plymouth Rocks still another month.

An investigation made by Purdue university developed the fact that many flocks are not doing as well as they could if the young pullets were properly fed and cared for. They are often crowded in the coops at night for the little brood coop that is big enough in the spring is crowded by late fall and the chicks sweat.

The most common mistake is poor feeding. The pullets are allowed free range over the farm and compelled to gather most of their living. They may grow, but it is a slow growth. To hurry this growth, plenty of mash should be kept before them at all times. A very simple mash for the older pullets can be made by taking 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds shorts, and 50 pounds of high-grade tankage. This should be placed dry in a self-feeder, or trough, and the pullets induced to eat all they will of it. Some grain should be fed in addition, that the pullets may be in good flesh when ready to start laying.

KEEP YOUNG STOCK GROWING

Succulent Green Feed, Variety of Grain, Fresh Water and Shade Are of Importance.

So long as the young stock have plenty of succulent green food, a variety of grain, fresh water, shade and exercise, together with well-ventilated sleeping quarters, they will grow like the proverbial weed. But if the growth is stunted by the lack of any one of these essentials, gain is slower even when conditions become normal than it would have been. The poultry grower gets tired; surely the chickens ought to be all right for one night—but that very night is the night the chickens take to pile up. Morning finds the half-grown stock gaunt; a day or so shows them with the dirty nostrils that come when the catarrhal discharge has filled with dust.

A cold from crowding soon becomes a rumpy cold unless prompt action heads it off, and one night's neglect has cost dearly.

Keep them growing by giving more room through culling market stock as fast as it develops, and by providing shade.

MATURE CHICKENS ON RANGE

Good Summer Ration for Hens is Mixture of Wheat, Oats and Corn, One Part Each.

Encourage mature chickens to range by feeding them sparingly. A good summer ration for hens consists of 1 part wheat, 1 part oats, and 1 part corn, by weight. More eggs are obtained where the birds are fed a little grain than when forced to depend upon "pickings" about the farm.

POULTRY NOTES

Cockerels to be kept for breeding purposes should be handled in a similar manner to pullets.

Young stock will do better if not compelled to pick their living with the old. There will also be less trouble from lice.

Misshapen eggs are always penalized by the market and bring an inferior price to smooth, even, perfectly shaped eggs.

Do not make the mistake of feeding too much in the early days of the fattening process. It should ever be kept in mind that the appetite must be preserved unimpaired.

Shade is one of the most important essentials during the hot months. Get the chicks into the orchard and cornfield. It is not too late to plant sunflowers.

Old Fellows' Convention.

A big parade will be the principal feature of the state convention of Old Fellows which opens at Albany Sunday. The parade will be held Tuesday.

Walter T. Candler, son of the multi-millionaire Coca Cola King, of Atlanta, Ga., has been sued for $100,000 by Mrs. Sarah Gillespie Byfield, wife of Clyde K. Byfield, an Atlanta automobile dealer. She alleges she was attacked by Candler in her cabin on the liner Berengaria while en route to Europe. She and her husband were guests of Candler to take care of his two little children. Her husband attacked Candler and later received from Candler a note for $25,000 as a result of the episode. Candler sued to void the note, and Mrs. Byfield replied by instituting suit. Candler is separated from his wife, who is now in California and who once was friendly with Mrs. Byfield, with whom she was pictured at the Druid Hills Race Course, in Atlanta.

Nine persons were killed and fifty injured in a wreck at Annandale, Minn., when a motor truck, struck by a fast passenger train at a crossing, was thrown against a switch, which it opened, with the result that the train was split in two parts and dished into a freight train in that had taken a siding to lay the passenger train pass. Four cars were telescoped into the freight. The photograph shows the first day coach next to the smoker, in which all the deaths occurred.
